Publication Ethics and Malpractice Statement

Established in Aug. 2020

Editorial Board and the editorial office on the journal’s Web site. Copyright and way of access of individual articles are shown on the journal’s web site.

Authors and Authors responsibilities

- Submission fee, excess page charge fee, color printing fee, and reprint fee are described in Information for Authors.
- For original papers, feature articles, and interpretive articles, submitted manuscripts will be peer-reviewed by several referees and an Associate Editor. Acceptance for publication will be decided by the Editorial Board based on results of the review. For general articles, manuscripts may or may not be peer-reviewed based on the decision of the Board.
- The Editorial Board may return the manuscript to the author(s) with request for revisions. Manuscripts that are requested for revision should be resubmitted after revision as quickly as possible. When no response is made by the author(s) within 3 months after the return of the manuscript, the manuscript will be regarded as having been withdrawn.
- Manuscripts written in English may be checked by researchers with expertise in writing in English in order to improve the clarity of presentation and/or readability, either at the author’s request or by the decision of the Editorial Board and with the author’s consent. English proofreading fees will be charged to the authors in such cases.
- In order to unify terms and formatting, the Editorial Board may correct manuscripts to the extent that the meaning of a passage is not altered. Corrections will only be made with the author’s consent.
- Include as coauthors only those persons who have made significant scientific contributions to the work. All coauthors share responsibility for the quality and integrity of the submitted and published manuscript.
- Typographical errors will be corrected at the author’s request.
- Corrections, additions when the Editorial Board admits it, may be published in a forthcoming issue.
- All sources of financial support for the research should be clearly stated.
- An author should cite those publications that have been influential in determining the nature of the reported work and that will guide the reader quickly to the earlier work that is essential for understanding the present investigation.
- Never plagiarize the work of others or your own work. Always provide appropriate citation.
- The publication of some kinds of articles (such as clinical guidelines, translations) in more than one journal is sometimes justifiable, provided that certain conditions are met. The authors and editors of the journals concerned must agree to the secondary publication, which must reflect the same data and interpretation of the primary document. The primary reference must be cited in the secondary publication.

Peer-review process

- For original papers, feature articles, and interpretive articles, submitted manuscripts will be peer-reviewed by several referees and an Associate Editor. For general articles, manuscripts may or may not be peer-reviewed based on the decision of the Editorial Board. This statement is also described on the journal’s Web site.

- Referees should have qualifications and expertise to judge the content of the manuscript. According to referees' comments and advises on the manuscript, the Editorial Board may return the manuscript to the author(s) with request for revisions. Manuscripts that are requested for revision should be resubmitted after revision as quickly as possible. This statement is also described on the journal's Web site.
- Acceptance for publication will be decided by the Editorial Board based on results of the review. Decisions on publication should be objective.
- Referees should have no conflicts of interest. In any case if conflicts of interest with any of the referee is suspected, an author or an Editorial Board member can contact the editorial office. According to decision by the Editorial Board, a referee who declares a conflict of interest is unassigned from the manuscript in question and replaced by a new referee.
- Referees should identify relevant published work that has not been cited by the authors. Any statement about an observation, derivation, or argument that had been previously reported should be accompanied by the relevant citation.
- The journal maintains confidentiality with all unpublished manuscripts. Referees must not use unpublished materials disclosed in a submitted manuscript without the express written consent of the author.
